Shh! It's a Secret!

by Kelly Hashway

"Don't tell anyone," Jennifer said. "It's a secret."

Reagan sighed. Jennifer wanted everything to be a secret. She thought it made her mysterious if people didn't know much about her. Maybe Jennifer was right. She had quickly become the most popular girl in school. But Reagan was getting tired of keeping secrets. Especially from her best friend Lena.

"Hey, guys," Lena said, walking over and sitting next to Reagan and Jennifer at the cafeteria table. "What are you talking about?"

"Nothing," Jennifer said.

Reagan shifted in her seat and crumpled her napkin in her hand. "Well—"

"Reagan! You can't tell her," Jennifer said. "It's a secret. You can't tell other people's secrets."

"But she should know this. It's about—"

Jennifer narrowed her eyes at Reagan. "If you can't keep a secret, I'll have to find another friend who can."

"It's just that this isn't really a secret," Reagan said.

"Anything can be a secret. It's more fun that way."

"How is keeping secrets fun?" Lena asked.

Jennifer smirked. "It's fun when everyone wants to know what your secret is."

"Well, it's not fun for the people who don't know the secret." Lena got up and walked away.

Reagan stood up. "I'll keep your secret because I'm your friend," she told Jennifer, "but I don't want to know any more secrets. Don't tell me anything I can't tell Lena. She's one of my best friends, and I don't like making her feel left out." Reagan turned and walked off after Lena.

"Wait!" Jennifer said. "You can tell Lena that tryouts for the play are being moved up to Thursday. She should know since she's going out for the lead, too."

Reagan smiled. "Secrets are fine every once in a while. But Lena's your friend. You shouldn't want to keep things from her."

"You're right," Jennifer said. "Let's go find her and tell her about tryouts right now."
